SCRIPT/NARRATION Did you know that 95% of children ages 12-17 are online? Also according to statista.com 70 percent of teenagers check social media several times a day. This type of communication	is controlling our society. Our online behaviors can have lifelong impacts. For example, at my school	a student posted negative comments and was reported to administration. Even though the post was deleted, and an apology was given, the memory of that post will remain with the subject, their family and all our school's staff. Thousands of these cases could be eliminated by smart decisions and proper digital citizenship. According to

SCRIPT/NARRATION and FCS classes can help to promote proper Digital Citizenship at their school and community. This connects to FCS with standard 2.4.2- to analyze how media and technological advances include family and consumer decision- making, as well as	standard 2.4.3 to assess the use of technology and its effect on quality of life. It is important for everyone to help educate about this important topic that can have lifelong consequences. In conclusion, be aware	of what your posting and who can see it. What you post, like or share online speaks volume about you. Post with intention. Repost
